

Lessons from the Court

NBA Legend helps business teams aim higher

Considered one of the 50 Greatest Players in NBA History, Rick Barry's spectacular NBA career spanned 15 years, six teams, a Championship, and set records that still remain unsurpassed. He is the only player to lead the NCAA, American Basketball Association (ABA), and NBA in points per game in a season. The prolific scorer was known for his unorthodox, under-handed free-throw shooting style, dubbed "The Granny," which proved to be a success.

Today, Barry is an avid golfer, fly fisherman, nationally ranked Pickleball player and entrepreneur dedicated to improving health and the environment, serving on several company boards. Barry resides in Florida and Colorado – offering opportunities for corporate outings and team-building events that can include sports activities and leadership seminars by the man himself. Barry's passion for inspiring others is contagious.
